

The no call list has been a real blessing. In spite of the law, companies find ways of breaking it without leaving a way of detecting who has called. This seems especially true of companies selling services related to Disney. In spite of the violations, the very real relief provided by Wisconsin's law is wonderful. I absolutely do NOT want the federal government to interfere in my state's efforts on my behalf. I plan to send this same message to my state senators and congressional representatives.

Commercial calls to my home are a violation of my time as well as my privacy. Some of the people who call are objectionable. The volume of calling before our law went into place had me either snarling into the phone or refraining from answering a call that later turned out to be important.

Tell the banks and other sectors of commerce to use the US mail! At least I can continue to sort and throw that away on my own time frame. Under no circumstance do I want the federal executive changing a law that everyone I know truly values. You can't begin to understand the conversations of sheer delight and relief among co-workers when this law went into effect. Please, DO NOT MODIFY WISCONSIN'S LAW.
